Teaching & Learning Surveys

Beyond the normal Quality Assurance mechanisms already in place at UIC, the following surveys for the enhancement of Teaching & Learning will also be taken up:

Mid-Term Teaching & Learning Survey

Mid-Term Teaching & Learning (T&L) Survey, usually conducted at the seventh teaching week each semester, is organised by individual academic unit within their unit only. Though the pen-and-pencil mid-term survey is optional, it is strongly advisable and encouraged.

This survey is intended to give instructors a formative assessment on how students are learning and thus allow instructors adjust their teaching plan timely and efficiently. The exercise can also supply supplementary information on the evaluation of teaching effectiveness in addition to the college-wide term-end online teaching and learning evaluation.

Semester-End Online Teaching & Learning Evaluation

Online teaching and learning evaluation (TLE) is conducted at the end of each semester. The exercise aims to provide teaching staff with student feedback on the effectiveness of their teaching and to assess the attainment of intended learning outcomes by students. It forms one component of the College's comprehensive quality assurance system in teaching and learning.
